

DUST OF SNOW

STUDY-NOTE

- The poem “Dust of Snow” by Robert Frost is a simple and short poem, yet with a deeper and larger meaning.
- Dust of Snow is a short and beautiful poem written by Robert Frost. It is a motivating poem that tells us how our view of perceiving things changes our minds and puts a greater impact on our lives.
- By enjoying the simple moments of life, we can get rid of our day-to-day problems and worries. This also helps us in living a happy and healthy life. The author was experiencing one such bad day when a crow's movement near a hemlock tree dusted snow upon him.
- The snow instantly makes him happier. His day gets a lot better. Thus, the supremacy of nature as a whole made him realise how petty his problem was. The fact that hemlock tree is poisonous combined with crow being the indicator of doom and fear are used in the poem as the carriers of happiness in the life of the narrator is ironical. The poet, through these objects, has tried to highlight that sometimes creatures linked with negative aspects of life can be the bringer of change and happiness.
- Being outdoors in nature, with all its unpredictability can benefit anyone, anywhere at any time. Thus, the poem teaches us that nothing in this world, no matter how small, is unworthy. Every object is significant. It also shows us that even the smallest things in life can bring us happiness, just as the snow did for the poet.

The Dust Of Snow

poet : Robert Frost	The poet is in a very bad situation when he sits under a hemlock tree.
Hemlock is a poisonous plant with small white flowers. Crow is always said to be a sign of bad luck.	Even though Hemlock is a poisonous tree the snow fell from the tree when the crow eat made him feel better.
So, the poet is trying to say that even in the bad situation and surrounding good things can happen.
